The NIPP© program addresses these new regulations including how to implement the surveillance system; how to use surveillance data to drive decision making; reviews nationally recognized guidelines for when and how isolation precautions should be used for a resident and discusses criteria for decision-making on when to discontinue isolation; provides instruction on how to conduct an infection control risk assessment; provides information on environmental cleaning and disinfection; and discusses key strategies to support antibiotic stewardship. This seminar is designed to cover topics that will assist facilities in preventing infections and developing an infection control program that will meet and maintain regulatory compliance.
